Dear Sir/Madam,

The NOMAN is an Island Campaign wishes to extend its sincerest gratitude to JVA Brokers Ltd and their clients for their generosity in nominating our Foundation for the JVA Charity Day on 8th October 2015.

When we lost our mother Paulette to HPV-related anal cancer, we decided to turn our frustration into action. HPV is the causal agent of 5% of all cancers. We have endeavoured to educate the public about anal cancer and other HPV-associated cancers, reduce the stigma associated with these diseases, advocate for prevention and improved early screening methods, and invest in research for improved therapeutic treatments. We are confident that improved awareness and screening practices in the medical and patient communities will increase earlier diagnosis, and ultimately, prolong survivorship.

The £3223.41 donation from JVA will be used exclusively towards our Immortal Anal Cancer Cell Line prize. The overall goal of the cell line initiative is to develop five immortal anal cancer cell lines for use in biomedical research to develop new cures for HPV-related cancers.

Using the forces of the market, each prize serves as an incentive for scientists to conduct the extensive work to create an anal cancer cell line. A key criteria is that the submitted lines must be 'immortal', thereby existing permanently as a research tool. There are currently no anal cancer cell lines nor FDA approved drugs to treat anal cancer. This is one of the first steps for clinical drug development – without cell lines researchers are missing an important tool to develop a cure for HPV and anal cancer.
